Catalog Course Description

If America is the land of opportunity, it is wise to study the cultural, social, economic, political, diplomatic, and military history of the United States in order to understand how this nation developed and where it might be going. This course will cover U.S. History from 1877 to the present. Students will investigate topics such as westward expansion, imperialism, the Industrial Revolution, urbanization, immigration, the Women's Rights movement, the Progressive Movement, the Great War, the "Roaring Twenties," the Great Depression, World War II, the Cold War, the African American Civil Rights Movement, "The Sixties," the conservative backlash, technological innovations, terrorism, and globalization. Honors work challenges students to be more analytical and creative through expanded assignments, real-world applications, and enrichment opportunities. Credit will not be awarded for both the honors and regular versions of a course. Credit will be awarded only for the first course completed with a grade of C or better or "P" C-ID: HIST 140.

Lecture

Describe specific examples of the methods the instructor will use:

1. The instructor will have interactive lectures (allowing for questions, discussions, and exercises). These lectures will be complemented with the visuals provided by PowerPoint slides and short documentaries. The lectures will give students a fundamental understanding of the material as well as the critical thinking experiences needed to be proficient in the discipline.
2. Students will be instructed on how to research and compose a formal essay (for a Blue Book exam), how to research and write a research paper, and/or how to critically evaluate a primary source and explain its significance in writing.
3. Students be guided into class discussions about the course material, either in groups in a traditional classroom or in discussion forums for online classes.

Representative Course Assignments

Writing Assignments

1. Responses to specific tasks presented in worksheets or task specific activities
2. Rough drafts for assigned questions that might appear on an essay exam (a sample question might ask students to evaluate the impact of the Second Industrial Revolution on late nineteenth century American society)

3. Thought pieces in which students present their thoughts and assessment of concepts or questions put to them on the material encountered
4. A research paper or a research presentation on a topic like the evolution of the women's suffrage movement during the Progressive Era
5. A summary of what was learned from reading an assigned textbook (ex. chapter notes)
6. Creative presentations of ideas and concepts such as songs, poems, plays, stories, or dialogues
7. (Honors) Construct historiographical analysis of specific historical topics
8. (Honors) Additional research paper on relevant historical topic using outside scholarly sources, directed by instructor, cited in the Chicago style

Critical Thinking Assignments

1. The students may write argumentative papers that use critical thinking to choose a side in an historiographical debate and investigate the relevant primary sources needed to support their chosen position.
2. Students may participate in class and small group discussions debating the causes and outcomes of the Great Depression on the working class (online students will do the same using discussion boards).
3. Students may select a historically significant topic from the 20th century (with the consultation and approval of the instructor), then research the topic, and present their findings to the class with PowerPoint slides (ex. The Impact of Television on Politics in the 1950s).

Reading Assignments

1. Read, take notes, and/or summarize textbook readings chosen for the course (ex. the new OpenStax OER "U.S. History").
2. Evaluate a document or primary source reader for its context within history, as well as the motives and logic of the writer.
3. Conduct research into a particular issue or event, by reading and evaluating supplemental handouts prepared by the instructor or discovered on a reputable Internet sources (ex. compile a detailed timeline of the Reconstruction or writing a research paper on the successes and failures of Reconstruction).

Other assignments (if applicable)

1. Library inquiry activities and assignments
2. Internet inquiry activities such as locating bodies of evidence and documents pertaining to the material covered in class
3. Reviewing documentaries such as the series "Eyes on the Prize"
4. (Honors) Conduct interviews of persons for oral history projects. Example: Students could interview members of their community to understand how perspectives of history differ over time. For example, students could interview members of their community about immigration, constitutional rights, or their historical memory concerning American forefathers/historical events.
5. (Honors) Required outside of class /office hours consultations regarding research with instructor

Outside Assignments

Representative Outside Assignments

1. Students may be required to read a resource and write short summaries of the key ideas in each section of a textbook chapter or article.
2. Student may be required to compose rough drafts in response to potential essay exam questions (emphasis on how to compose a formal essay).
3. Students may be required to conduct research for a paper or a presentation.
